Washington Letter
(From our regular correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, July 30, 1894.
The key to the deadlock has not yet been found, but there is little doubt that it will be during the present week, if not by the conference committee, then by the democrats of the House, who have about decided to hold a caucus to settle the matter.
If the conference committee fails to reach an agreement by Tuesday, Few people in Washington now have any doubt that the result will be the Senate bill standing as it stands, although there will be numerous amendments proposed.

ADVICE.
Girl number one I called upon
the other day.
And begged of her to kiss me
Before I took my leave.
To a jolly party I went
And I thought that I was
And when I asked her for a kiss
I got the same old "No!"
I asked my sister how it was
She said I had lost it.
"Why, you should have been, silly goose."
Was all my sister said.

HER DILEMMA.

To and fro, back and across the road between carpet of the drawing room
in a Victoria street fast swept and rustled the faces and limbs of Mrs. Van-ning's nearest neighbors.

"What shall I do? What shall I do?"
cried Mrs. Vanning as she looked at the hundredth time the writing table
before her.

"I have been married for five years,"
she said to herself, "and I have never been able to get on my feet. I have been a failure in every way."

"I have been married for five years,"
she said to herself, "and I have never

me! I laughed at him—he was so poor
—for, though my heart ached for him, my head was too tight to remember anything but that I was young and pretty.
It seemed so right that, after all, I am obliged to marry some man I hate anyway. Now for it!"
In her nervous writing she penned eight letters to the men who within the last few months had wooed and tried to win the prettiest widow in London. She playfully claimed the pro-prio of her own sex and wrote plaintively of her lonely life and her longing for a guiding hand and a strong arm.
When the task was completed, she rang the bell, and sending for her maid told her to prepare for a week's stay in the country.

"Who has called?" Mrs. Vanning asked as she entered her flat on her return from the country. A short, stout man with a red face and a white neck-tie stood before her. The first she demanded was:

"Now, wonder how many men I shall meet here? How many of them I shall read all those?"

"Sir Rodolphe! So glad to hear I'm well—your Scotland was so lovely. I kindly regards. How Scotch!"

"The bishop refuses to see me taking a most serious view of my conduct."
His wife looked at him with a satisfied smile.

"That's the text of the old sermon."
The three years of her widowhood I had read at Christmas and everything else to match. Laura Martineau had been a great comfort to her. Her French brocade, I read in her hand thousands of doing up my rooms with old embroidery. Suppose she's got a reception for her new dress. I have a country cousin for mine."

"She dropped into the writing chair and looked at her clock. It was eight o'clock. She had been waiting for him for an hour. She had been waiting for him for an hour. She had

Wrinkled Faces.

Preventing Wrinkles of the Face by Means of "Skin Food."

Referring to the indications of age, a writer in Good Housekeeping says: "The fact that the tissue is wearing away suggests that they should be fed in a different way from that in which they usually derive sustenance. For this purpose 'skin food' is manufactured and sold at a high price by 'cosmetic specialists.'"

When we consider the anatomical structure of the skin and how easily it absorbs substances applied to it, it seems not only possible, but probable, that we can localize the increase of flesh. But we must do this with care and discretion.

There are cosmetics sold under the title of skin foods that owe their efficacy to astringents, which for a time give firmness and tautness to the skin, but this effect is merely temporary. In time the texture becomes altered, and premature wrinkles are produced. But the idea of a skin food is good, and below I give a formula which may be made at home, the ingredients of which, it will be seen at a glance, are perfectly harmless.

"Mix together in a vessel immersed in boiling water 8 ounces of pure glycerine (clarified), 3 ounces of spermaceti and 1 1/2 ounces of white wax. When thoroughly melted, pour the whole in a pan and beat the mass continually until it is uniform in body. Add enough rosewater and almond oil to produce an agreeable perfume. Heat it again until thin enough to pour and fill wide-mouthed bottles or jars, and label 'Skin Food.'"

In order to make the skin in a sensitive, receptive condition before the skin food is applied, it is best to steam the face. To do so conveniently fit a large mouthed funnel into the neck of the teakettle, make a snug fit with a towel, and after covering the eyes with cotton to prevent them from the steam, adjust the funnel and sit so that the steam from the kettle will reach the face. About 15 minutes will be long enough of the steaming process. Remove the cotton and scrape the face with an ivory paper knife, rub with a towel and anoint with a liberal supply of the skin food. Let it remain overnight, protecting the bed linen from soil by the use of old muslin spread over the pillow.

Antidote For Pruritus.
A Hungarian chemist is reported to have discovered in a new chemical compound, nitrate of cerium—a most efficacious antidote to poisoning by cyanide of potassium or pruritus acid. He tried the antidote with success, first on animals and after ward on persons who had been accidentally poisoned with pruritus acid.

GUESTS IN THE COUNTRY.
A Hint For the Rainy Days—The Formalities of Parting.

One feels personally responsible for the weather when one has visitors in the country. The prospect of a rainy day seems dismal and depressing. Experience goes to show, however, that being housed together under those circumstances often brings about most cordial relations between one's guests and oneself, and annihilates the barriers of formality. Then, as Harper's Bazar recommends, is the time to suggest some plan for which preparation must be made—private theatricals, tableaux in their more modern development, representing famous paintings or a lawn party "costume," to which the neighbors are invited.

Where the guests are well acquainted the hostess may entertain them with a story of her own, or a series of letters of which she has collected, or a series of letters of which she has collected, or a series of letters of which she has collected.

Smith-Drury.
The cottage and grounds of Charles E. Smith on Cowing avenue, East Weymouth, were the scene of a charming home wedding Wednesday afternoon.
The contracting parties were Lester E. Smith, son of the host, and Miss Sarah Drury of Waltham.
The parlor of this pleasant home was very tastefully decorated for the occasion with trailing vines, flowers and flags. The bride was exquisitely attired in a gown of white, with a train of tulle and lace, and a crown of flowers. The bridegroom wore a suit of dark cloth, with a white shirt and bow tie. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. McDonald of the First Church, and the usual ritual of that church was used. At the conclusion of the ceremony, a fine collation was served and later on the newly wedded pair left for Weymouth, where they will reside.

Owing to the disbanding of the Braintree club the Institutes, who were scheduled to play that club, did not play. Most of the players were present and indulged in a little practice after which they went to North Weymouth and saw the fun at that place.

The Institutes are scheduled to play at North Weymouth tomorrow afternoon. One week from Randolph, August 25th, the North Weymouths will play at Weymouth and see how the game will turn out.

Lampie is pitching for the Haverhill, New England League club and has been doing his best work of the season. The Haverhill and Walthams played at Haverhill last Saturday. The score was 11 to 4, in favor of the home team.

A Grand Success.
Last Monday evening at the Old Fellows Opera house, East Weymouth, the "Black Flag" was presented by some of our local talent under the direction of Mr. M. M. Jones, an old Weymouth boy, known professionally as Harry English. The audience was a fair-sized one and the performance was one that was creditable in every respect.

Each participant seemed to have fallen naturally into the character he had adopted. The orchestra furnished the music. Mr. Maloney as the vagabond, open-hearted, personated brother Harry, was of course the bright particular star of the evening. Easily winning sympathy and admiration as his lines were full of pathos or humor, mainly dignity. Rounds of applause greeted his entrance and his exit. At the close he was simply overwhelmed in his dressing room by the congratulations of friends. The part of Jack Glynndon, the villainous brother, was assumed by Daniel Ryan with his usual success. Miss Nellie Flynn, as Naomi, deserved praise for the excellent conception of the character assigned her. Miss Flynn's acting was the subject of much favorable comment. Joseph McCourt was right at home as the old gentleman Owen Glynndon, his voice, action, and general make-up being very good.

By John White, who kept his audience in a roar of laughter; he made one of the hits of the evening by his special reference to the "Little Nell" and it would be hard to pick out among local amateurs one who could do better in this character; the realism of the death scene drew forth more than one handkerchief. Mr. Walsh as Capt. Handley, with his elongated whiskers, made a very brilliant looking shipper indeed. Mr. Croker looked as if in real life he might make a good and faithful warder. Mr. Killy was touted out as an Irishman and sported a new imported gallus in the closing scene and vindication of Harry, the vagabond.

Here might be mentioned the closing scene in number, whose march in close single file was something inspiring, that, in a certain sense. The entire affair reflects great credit on Mr. M. M. Jones, who spared neither time nor pains to give to his patrons and friends something that was well worthy of the encouragement of their presence.

The Campaign Opens.
Mr. Thomas H. Fitch of Braintree, has accepted the nomination tendered him by the People's Party, and has entered upon a vigorous canvass of the district.

Arrangements are being made to have his address at the village in the town, and also in each ward in the city of Quincy. E. Gerry Brown of Brockton, Mr. C. Baldwin and Henry R. Legate of Boston will also explain the principles of the party in this vicinity.

Brown China Geese. The color of this variety of geese is not uniform, but is in most instances brown, shading from dark to light.

Even the English and Muscovite, who are not prejudiced by religion in their breeding, cannot resist the temptation to breed a pair of geese, which will yield them a profit.

Other geese are generally, though not invariably, satisfied with one attempt at incubation, and if frustrated

General News and Notes. The executive committee of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations has decided to hold their next meeting at Washington on Nov. 12.

What makes you think he is so in love with you? Mrs. von Blumner (sweetly)—Yes. But I felt sure he would be. He told me he was going to meet your husband.

Proof Positive. Mrs. Kingling—Wasn't your husband on every side last night? Mrs. von Blumner (sweetly)—Yes. But I felt sure he would be. He told me he was going to meet your husband.

Where Do the Small Cakes Go? The mystery of where the pine goes has never been solved, and the disappearance of the small cakes is almost equally mysterious.

Some one who has been investigating this subject says that half cents were coined up to 1877, and none returned to the mint for recoinage. Some hundreds are held by collectors, and the rest have absolutely disappeared.

Of the old copper pennies, more than 100,000,000 still remain unaccounted for. Five million five hundred thousand bronze 2 cent pieces were also coined, and 3,000,000 are missing, and of nickel 3 cent pieces 2,000,000 are still outstanding, although the ordinary person does not handle six in a year.

How the Eskimo Count. The Eskimo count upon their fingers—the first, four, five. Above five are counted up to 10 by the second hand. Thus, six is "the first finger on the other hand," above to they employ the toes. Thirty, for instance, is "three toes on the one foot," and 18 "three toes on the second foot." They seldom go further than this, but they can do so if necessary. For example, they count 22 the fingers "two on the second man," 37 by "two toes on the second man's second foot," 40 is "the whole of a second man." According to Dr. Naansen, they cannot, or at least do not, count 100, which is "the whole of the fifth man."

A Boy's Invention. The credit of inventing his apparatus for photographing projectiles in flight is given to Dr. Jacob Frick of Germany by a little Scotch boy 12 years old named Vernon.

How to Cure For Wet Shoes. First wipe off gently with a soft cloth all surface water and mud. Then, while still wet, rub well with paraffin oil, using flannel for the purpose. Set them aside till partially dry, when a second treatment with oil is advisable. They may then be deposited in a convenient warm place, where they will dry gradually and thoroughly. Before applying French lard drawing give them a final rubbing with the flannel, still slightly dampened with paraffin, and the boots will be soft and flexible as new and be very little affected by their bath in the rain.

How to Make Tartar Sauce. Put the yolk of one fresh egg in a bowl or a deep soup plate. Commence stirring this about gently, always one way, then gradually stir in a quantity of a tablespoonful of dry mustard. A box-wood spoon or fork is the best to stir it with. After you have stirred this for one minute take a bottle of French olive oil, and drop by drop stir it in. As it gets very thick, thin with a few drops of Tartar vinegar or lemon juice, continuing the stirring all the time. Repeat this process till you have as much mixed as you need. The yolk of one egg will use up a pint bottle of oil. Stir well together, add a dash of red pepper, and you have a perfect tartar sauce.

The Charts of a Man-of-war.

ships of war carry about 3,000 Christians and with the aid of their powerful engines they are able to coast without the aid of sails or skirt any coast without the aid of a local pilot. Sometimes a mistake brings them to grief, as in the case of the unfortunate Komrogor. Some accidents are accidental and are charged to misfortune in reckonment. Richardson Glover tells us of his experience when he was the navigator of the Wyoming. Mr. Maynard, who had been a member of the navy for many years, was minister to Turkey. He was very anxious to visit the coast of the Black sea in a man-of-war. This privilege had been denied him by the nations since the Crimean war, so he went as the grand vizier of the sultan, who was very friendly to the United States, subject to withdrawal if any of the conditions of the trust failed. The object. Mr. Maynard was very anxious to sail at daybreak, but when learned that no pilot was to be taken he became very much exercised. Captain Gifford took him to the coast and showed him that there was a little port on the shores of the lake the Wyoming had a chart. Maynard was quite sure that charts must have been put on especially for the purpose. He then found that every war vessel of the United States was equally well read to cruise in the Black sea he had he had had an object lesson in the use of the chart system which taught him much. During his stay in congress he had always opposed appropriations for the chart department hydrographic office. He admitted young was quite as well prepared to cruise in any waters as in the "of the Black sea.—St. Louis Democrat.

In former days some Masons were held in taverns. The most important of these was one called the "Blue Room," which probably have given rise to the rumor that they were used in initiations. At this day it is often noticed that a candidate casts suspicious glances to the typewriter, clock, and other things of the room, and reports ready and immediate use on poor Mr. Candidate.

As to the gridiron, this is always a source of good eating, and Masons return to eat after initiation, as well as any other class of good and obedient; hence the gridiron is in high veneration by the brethren before and after initiation, more so than any other thing. After the supper he divests into Masonry or the apron, and the candidate is made to a brother climb on the mystic

How to Make a Substitutes For Putty.
A cheap and effective substitute for putty to stop cracks in woodwork is made by soaking newspapers in a paste of flour and water, then boiling by boiling a pound of flour in four quarts of water and adding a teaspoonful of alum. The mixture should be stirred constantly with a stick about the same consistency as putty and should be forced into the cracks with a cork knife. It will harden like paper mache, and when dry may be sanded or stained to match the surroundings, when it will be almost invisible.
